Circulated to 108,000 homes and businesses by Hackney Council

Issue 400 10 April 2017

Cheering crowds came out to support smiling runners as they surged down Broadway Market during the ever-popular Hackney half marathon last year

ON YOUR MARKS...

THE borough is set to echo with the sounds of cheering crowds and pounding feet as the Hackney Half Marathon once again takes over the streets.

Tens of thousands of runners will pass many of Hackney's most iconic landmarks on the 13.1 mile course, including Hackney Downs, Hackney Empire, Broadway Market, Victoria Park and the Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park.

The race on 30 April forms part of the Virgin Sport Hackney Festival of Fitness, held in partnership with the Council.

Hackney Marshes will be transformed into a free access festival village, featuring local bands and DJs, roaming entertainment, live artwork installations, pop-up sports activities, plus an amazing array of East London's finest food and drink.

The Hackney Half Marathon starts at 9am and for those keener on shorter distances, there is a 5.5km fun race in the afternoon.

There will also be a fitness and yoga boot camp, including

Faisal Abdulla (Ellie Goulding's personal trainer) hosting a high intensity interval training class full of positive mental attitude, and Hackney-based Fat Buddha Yoga providing the next generation of urban yoga.

All roads around the half marathon route (see map on page 3) will close at 7am and will be re-opened by 2pm. Lee Conservancy Road and Homerton Road, between the junctions of Digby Road and Eastway, will then be closed from 1pm to 2pm for the 5.5k race.

Event organisers want to encourage people to join in the fun and are creating three Fan Hubs with a range of bands and DJs to keep spectators entertained as they cheer on the participants, and to motivate the runners as they travel round the half marathon course.

NEW planning rules will stop private developers changing business premises, warehouses and launderettes into unaffordable homes.

Under an Article 4 Direction, the borough's light industrial spaces, including small breweries, design studios and Hackney's 14 remaining launderettes, will be protected by forcing developers to apply for planning permission before they can change a business premises' use.

The new planning rules, approved by the Council on 27 March, will help retain new and established

“The Council has taken the lead by ensuring you need planning permission to change the use of employment space” businesses, vital for local communities, jobs, the 'maker economy' and the borough's reputation as a centre for entrepreneurs.

The measures also recognise the important role launderettes play for residents on a low income, those living in temporary accommodation or small bedsits, and students.

Launderettes are disappearing from the UK high street, with a national peak of 12,500 in the 1980s to just 3,000 today, 450 of which are in London.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Planning, Business and Investment, said: “When the Government introduced permitted development rights, they opened the door for private developers to change the use of buildings in our borough – without seeking planning permission first – from valuable employment space for businesses into homes for private rent or sale. A short-sighted policy imposed on our local community and its economy.

“By introducing Article 4 Directions, we have made sure the Council has taken the lead in responding to this short-sighted approach by ensuring you have to get planning permission if you want to change the use of employment space in the borough.

“The latest directions also require developers to seek planning permission if they want to change the use of buildings that support start-ups, warehousing or light manufacturing, and now we are adding launderettes to this list.”

The Article 4 Direction will remove permitted development rights that were brought in by the Government and allow developers to convert properties from various uses including offices, warehouses or shops, to private housing, without planning permission.

A consultation, open to all residents and businesses, is set to be launched next month before the new plans are put in place.

The new planning rules will come into force next May and will be reviewed after three years.

Join in celebration of sport

FEELING inspired to work up a sweat? Hackney residents are being offered free entry to the 5.5k fun run as part of the Virgin Sport Festival of Fitness.

Participants will get to enjoy the full 'big city race' treatment, complete with water stations, bands and entertainment, pace setters, signage, finishers medals and t-shirts.

Places for the fun run on 30 April will be allocated on a first-come, first-served basis and applicants must be aged 15 years or over.

The 5.5k starts at 1.45pm.

Alternatively, if people prefer to workout on the spot, join in one of the free stretch, exercise, dance or yoga classes taking place during the day.

Choose between one of three high intensity interval training (HIIT) workouts; numerous stretch sessions throughout the day; a drum and box workout; two dance classes to 'Thriller' and 'Beat It'; and a 'yoga for all' class to round off the day. See the timeline below for a guide to the various free sessions – timings might vary on the day.

Finally, even if people can't be tempted to run, sweat or stretch, there will be plenty of opportunity to exercise their vocal chords by cheering on the half marathoners at one of the three 'Fan Hubs' along the race course:

- Hub 1: Mare Street, directly opposite Hackney Town Hall near mile five.
- Hub 2: Victoria Park Village, within the heart of the leafy Victoria Park immediately after mile eight.
- Hub 3: Here East, the canal-side watering hole in Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park at mile 12.5, where there will be live bands performing.

These Fan Hubs will be great spots to soak up the atmosphere of Hackney Half Marathon and to cheer on all the runners. And maybe you'll be inspired enough to enter next year.

Thieves on wheels

BEWARE of phone thieves on mopeds and bicycles – that’s the message from the Council and police – as figures show nearly 50 phones a day are being snatched from pedestrians in the borough.

Criminals, typically working in pairs on stolen mopeds, are cruising the borough to target people using their mobile phones in public places.

They will often mount pavements to take the device, putting both the victim and passers-by in significant danger.

Figures show Hoxton and Shoreditch are particular hotspots for the crime. However, people are being urged to be vigilant across the borough at all times, particularly at bus stops, near train stations, outside pubs and clubs, and when wearing headphones.

To help keep safe from thieves on bikes and mopeds, PC Stephen Poet from the Metropolitan Police offers this advice:

- Always be aware of your surroundings
- Go hands-free to make a call
- Be discreet when using your phone, or put it out of sight
- The edge of the road is the thieves’ favourite spot for a snatch and grab, so

Keep your phone safe from opportunistic criminals on motorbikes be extra vigilant at the curb side, at a bus stop, or outside a train station

- Try not to text or use apps while walking as you’ll be less aware of what’s going on around you
- If you have to use your phone, stand away from the roadside, close to a building or wall
- Try using your phone in the hand closest to the wall so it’s harder to take out of your hand.

Cllr Caroline Selman, Cabinet Member for Community Safety and Enforcement, said: “This crime is on the rise across London generally, and in Hackney, we’re seeing up to 48 thefts a day, or two an hour, by criminals on both mopeds and bicycles.

“I’m urging everyone to be alert when using their phone on the street to help protect yourself against those who want to take what doesn’t belong to them.

“I also have a clear message for the perpetrators: beware, we – the Council and police – are on to you and when caught, you will face the full force of the law. Robbery can lead to life imprisonment.”

The Council’s 24-hour

CCTV team works with the police to deter theft committed by people on bikes and mopeds, resulting in a number of arrests. Council wardens are also offering safety advice to people on the streets.

News in brief

New hostel for the homeless

Nearly 13,000 people are waiting for council homes

NEARLY 150 more rooms providing vital accommodation for families facing homelessness will be available later this year after the Council agreed a lease on a new Finsbury Park hostel.

The building in Seven Sisters Road will mean more homeless residents can be temporarily housed locally, maintaining crucial links to families, jobs and schools. The lease will help meet rising demand for housing. Currently, there are almost 13,000 people waiting for a Council home in Hackney. Unlike older hostels or bed and breakfasts used for temporary accommodation, the new building will have space for training, outreach and employment sessions to help residents access vital support. Construction work will be completed during the summer.

Philip Glanville, Mayor of Hackney, said: “London’s housing system is at breaking point, and the number of people applying for a Council home, or at risk of homelessness in Hackney is at record levels.

“We’re doing all we can to build more homes and find appropriate accommodation for families most in need of somewhere to stay or those fleeing abuse. This new hostel will help achieve that and ensure more people are able to be temporarily housed locally until they can find a permanent place to call home.”

The hostel will be run and maintained by Council staff, trained in domestic violence awareness, to liaise with the community, deal with anti-social behaviour and ensure residents are safe.

Parade to mark battalion’s freedom of the borough

A SHOREDITCH-based Army Reserve unit paraded outside Hackney Town Hall to exercise its Freedom of the Borough in front of a crowd of spectators on 1 April.

This is the highest honour a council can award and it gives the battalion the right to march through the streets of Hackney on all ceremonial occasions with colours flying, drums beating and bayonets fixed.

An operationally focused Army Reserve unit, 3 Military Intelligence Battalion moved to the borough in 2001.

Speaker of Hackney,

Cllr Rosemary Sales, said: “The parade by 3 Military Intelligence Battalion helps Hackney fulfil its support for our armed forces in the community, recognises the sacrifices our armed forces face and encourages the armed forces based in Hackney to integrate into the local life of the borough.”

The Council is a signatory of the Armed Forces Covenant, a promise that those who serve or have served, and their families, are treated fairly. Marking the unit’s Freedom of the Borough with parades helps promote its work under this covenant.

New photo book documents Hackney's teeming community of artists and creatives

By Harriet Worsley

A CHANCE encounter at a market stall was the starting point for a new photo book that celebrates Hackney's artistic community.

Photographer Jenny Lewis got chatting to a complete stranger and was so inspired that she wanted to document her and her workplace.

Jenny explains: "I thought her style was just amazing, so I asked if I could come and photograph her in her studio. That's how it all got started."

That one conversation was to spark a four-year project in which Jenny delved into studios across Hackney, photographing the painters, illustrators, filmmakers, jewellers, ceramicists and fashion designers who worked within them.

The result is a new book, 'Hackney Studios', published by Hoxton Mini Press on 6 April. It explores the individual creativity of each artist featured on its pages, but also tries to capture the creativity of Hackney itself, a borough that is home to more artists than anywhere else in Europe.

Yet as local writer Sophie Howarth says in the book's introduction, most of this creative industry which gives Hackney so much character "takes place out of view, behind unassuming doors on residential streets, or tucked between makeshift partitions inside former factories and warehouses".

The book takes us inside

these intriguing spaces. Down an alleyway just off Kingsland Road, for example, Tony Hornecker has created a home out of abandoned stage sets and assorted bric-a-brac. World record-holding hoola-hooper Marawa Wamp, meanwhile, uses the public square behind Dalston Kingsland station as her open air studio.

Jenny explains: "I wanted to open these worlds up to as many people as possible. I'd never been to a gallery before I was 18. Then I moved to Hackney at 21 and was awestruck by the creative scene.

"I worked my way inside it slowly, and now that I'm part of it, I wanted to inspire people like the young me, who have never heard of some of these jobs."

As well as celebrating artistic life, however, the book also takes a realistic look at its challenges.

Jenny says: "Some of these artists are little known, others have really 'made it'. But most of them are shivering in unheated studios. I didn't want to gloss over the facts.”

DID YOU KNOW?

In the book, many of the artists talk candidly about the daily grind of writing proposals, funding applications and emails, not floating glamorously around exhibitions.

“It can be a tough life, and the artistic community here is a fragile one. I’m scared it’s going to disappear, particularly in places like Hackney Wick where developers are moving in. But the book celebrates these people who have the bravery to go their own way,” Jenny says.

As she photographed each artist, she asked them to recommend another.

She adds: “The threads of loyalty and inspiration connecting people to one another was heart-warming.

“Fine artists would nominate their assistants, students their tutors, and designers would nominate performers.”

Jenny hopes the book will spark the imaginations of young people, in particular.

“Hackney Studios has allowed me to explore my community, my own identity and allowed me to gather friends along the way,” she says.

Market-teen geniuses

Well Street Market is home to a thriving group of student and young entrepreneurs

By Harriet Worsley

CHLOE James doesn't look like your typical market trader. For one thing, she's only 15-years-old. But go down to Well Street on the first Saturday of every month and you'll find her holding her own among the regular stall holders, selling hot spiced apple juice, tropical mocktails and self-designed t-shirts and caps.

This is London's first ever Teenage Market, where young people can sell their wares. Get through a short interview process and they are given a free stall, to show products and hone entrepreneurial skills.

The market was launched last December by the Mayor of London, Sadiq Khan, who said: "Markets are about people coming together to have a go at making a business and doing something that creates jobs, growth and prosperity."

Four months later, the market is doing just that. It is a thriving home to 26 regular traders. But the 10 additional stalls that make up its Teenage Market and Student Makers section are a vital part of this mission to provide opportunities for the local community.

Chloe is one of 10 teen traders, aged between 14 and 17, who have come to the market with Hackney Quest, a charity that provides opportunities and activities for local young people.

Through the charity, the teens learned about branding, customer service and marketing. Then they started testing these new skills on their own market stall. Now, they are busy developing their products, supported all the while by a team of volunteers whose job it is to build their confidence and skills.

Some teens, such as Nathaniel Mills-Jones, have already demonstrated great determination and skill however.

Well Street once bustled with traders. In 1919, Tesco began life there as a market stall, and in 1975, 166 stalls lined the street every Saturday. But by 2008, the market had dwindled to nothing and the area was described as one of the most deprived in the UK.

So, in 2011, the Well Street Traders' and Residents' Association (WESTRA) was launched to bring the market and surrounding shopping streets back to life.

In order to do so, however, WESTRA had to crowdfund a daunting £79,000, and secure another £20,000 from the Mayor of London. Nathaniel, then aged just 15, made a trip to City Hall where he spoke eloquently about the positive impact that being part of the Teenage Market could have on his life and that of his peers. This helped secure further funding from private companies, including Hackney Walk, and enabled WESTRA to reach its crowdfunding target.

Today, Hackney Quest's teen traders are proving him right. They have created their own brand of organic apple juice 'Deep Within' and every time they come to the market, it sells out.

But they are not the only ones making a success of market days. Seven student makers are also doing a brisk trade.

Letitia Clark, 29, explains: "I sell quirky illustrated gift cards. My day job is as a chef in a nearby restaurant, but the student maker's market is amazing for me as it allows me free promotion, an opportunity to showcase my own creations, and to meet people and shopkeepers who might be interested in stocking my goods."

Like the Teenage Market programme, the Student

Makers scheme is unique. No other London market supports local artists, designers and makers by offering free stalls and 'street-based business training'. This training means that young people get mentoring and help on the day. There are also workshops on product development, marketing, how to sell and selling online.

People don't have to be a student to take part. Free stalls are offered to local artists, designers and makers aged 16 to 30.

Hackney is one of the most diverse places in the UK. In this regular feature, we profile the borough's great & good or just plain interesting

hackneypeople

By Harriet Worsley

THE next world record attempt will involve running 10km, while simultaneously hoola hooping, Marawa The Amazing tells me. The current record-holder did it in one hour and 20 minutes but she is unphased.

The Hackney resident already holds the record for the fastest mile running with a hoop: eight minutes. Oh, and she holds eight other hoola hoop related world records too.

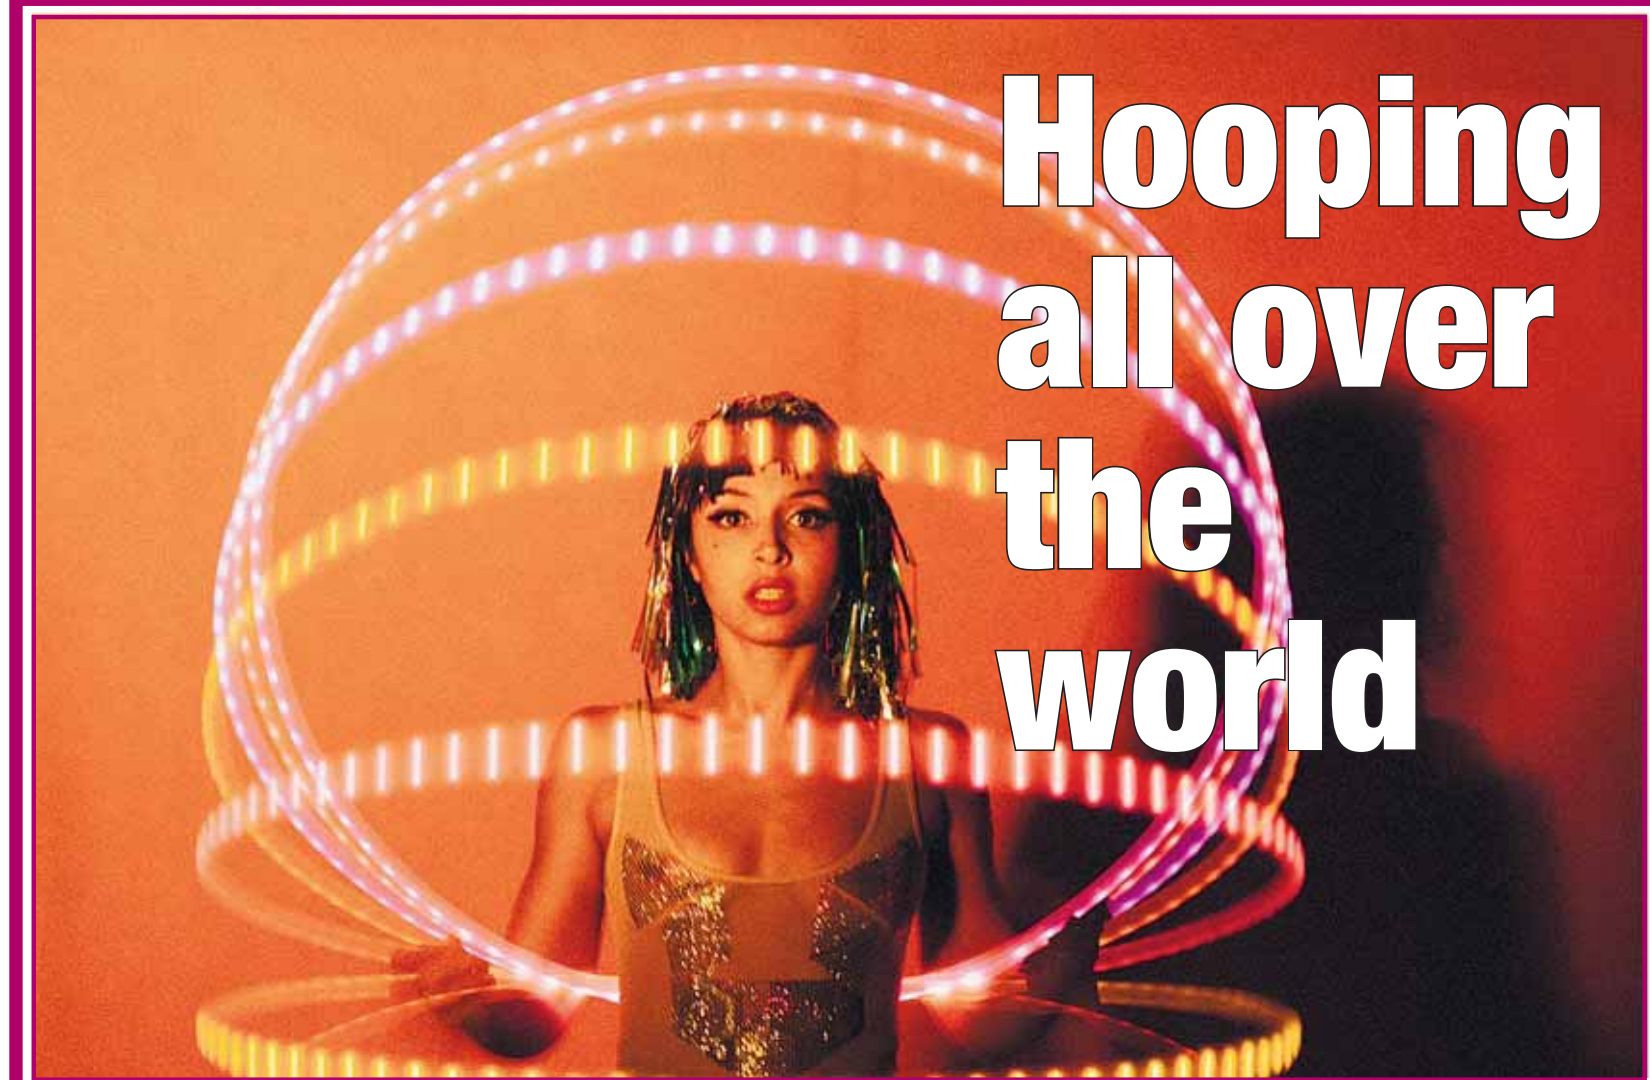

In fact, the Dalston resident can call upon an impressive list of statistics. One of her world records is for spinning 200 hoops at once. She came third on 'Arabs Got Talent', and was a semi finalist in 'Britain's Got Talent'.

Born Marawa Wamp in Melbourne, to a Somali father and an Australian mother, she spent her childhood shuttling between Australia, Papua New Guinea and the Middle East.

"It was great having a mix of cultures and religions around me. We travelled a lot and I went to international schools where you are exposed to even more cultures and traditions. The general attitude was so accepting of everyone's differences. When I look back, I feel really lucky to have been able to experience so much variety, but at the time it just felt really normal," she says.

Despite this, Marawa was not a born performer.

She reveals: "The only class I used to skip in high school was drama. I felt very self conscious! But I loved movement and dance, and circus was all about that. At a certain point, I realised I would have to perform, but it didn't feel scary because I didn't have to talk, just do my routines. And now its totally fine,

Marawa The Amazing has been wowing audiences worldwide with her hoola hoop skills

I don't get nervous at all anymore."

There is only one place in Australia where you can get a Bachelor's degree in Circus Arts. The National Institute of Circus Arts Australia (NICA). The teenage Marawa auditioned, and failed to get in. So she re-auditioned, and this time was offered a place. She says: "It was the only degree that made sense to me."

Marawa spent the next three years immersed in circus skills, specialising in the swinging trapeze.

"I loved trapeze, but I also trained in hoops and came to realise they would be so much easier to travel with. I also liked the idea that I could be responsible for my own stuff, I could do it anywhere," she says.

Through NICA, she found herself touring circus schools across China.

She says: "The whole trip was insane, seeing eight-

“My favourite place was North Korea. We were all communicating through hoops not words. It was cool” year-old girls training for an Olympics that was taking place in eight years time."

Then, she began travelling as a professional hoola hooper.

"I've now performed and taught in Nepal, New York, North Korea, Melbourne, Zagreb, Spain, Paris, Poland, Mexico, Somalia, LA... My favourite has to be North Korea. It was so crazy. The people had never seen anything like me, I had never seen anything like them, and we were all communicating through hoops, not words. It was so cool," she says savings to last three months, and didn't leave".

In 2007, she came to London "with enough

The first place she found was East London "and I felt at home straight away." With her sparkle and charm, you'd be forgiven for thinking Marawa's act was somewhat frivolous. You'd be wrong, though. During the London riots, she was saddened to see the Hackney shops and off-licenses that were looted and wanted to help.

She says: "We went out to clean up, but it had all been done so efficiently by the Council that there was nothing left for us to do.

"So instead, I took all my hoops out and let the kids play with them. It was a really great day, a chance to feel like everything would be okay, after such a crazy week."

The following year, she founded Marawa's Majorettes: 'a glittering team of adorable hoop performers' who teach in schools. She also does community work in Gillett Square, and this June, she is releasing her first book. 'The Girl Guide' is an honest, hilarious and informative guide for girls going through puberty.

The stories are told in Marawa's refreshingly frank voice, but she wrote it in consultation with adolescent medicine specialist, Dr Janice K Hillman.

She says: "I pitched the book two years ago and then set about writing my experiences – and all the things I worked out along the way – as a kind of handbook to any girl wondering what on earth is going on with her body.

"Everyone's experiences are different, but I hope the book will provide hope, and a chance to not feel like you are alone, weird or abnormal. I've been wanting to write it ever since I hit puberty."

Back then, she was told she was too chubby to be a performer. Now, she is one of the world's most popular and famous circus acts.

If anyone can make girls feel empowered, it could well be her.

Easy rider

A UNIQUE cycle taxi service will help older people and those with mobility issues to make short trips by bike around Hackney for free.

Ride Side by Side, which launches this month, will help residents who use Dial-a-Ride services to attend appointments, go shopping or visit friends.

The four-wheeled taxi bikes are custom-made and allow the trainer and passenger to sit side-by-side. Passengers can choose whether they want to join in and pedal, or sit back and enjoy the ride.

George Capon, 78, of Chatham Place, who trialled a shopping run to Tesco on Morning Lane, said: "I think it's an excellent idea. I hope it'll catch on for lots of older people. It'll give people that little bit of exercise and would be lovely to do in the summer months."

The service is run by Cycle Training UK, with funding from the Council, TfL and Department for Transport. Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, Transport and Parks, said: "We are pleased to launch the Ride Side by Side cycle taxi service in Hackney this spring."

"It will give the chance for those in the borough with mobility issues to get a free lift, whether that's to the hospital, to meet with friends, or visit the local area. It's also a great way to experience cycling, whatever your age, and to get out and get some exercise."

The service starts on 18 April and will run every Tuesday through spring and summer, with two hour slots available from:

- 9am-11am
- 11.15am-1.15pm
- 1.45pm-3.45pm
- 4pm-6pm.

Bookings can be made online at: ridesidebyside.eventbrite.com; or by calling: 020 7232 4384.

Community to grow a rainbow

FROM yellow carrots, striped tomatoes and purple beans to red sprouts and rainbow chard, a new community gardening group, where diversity thrives, will be growing a rainbow throughout the summer.

The LGBTQI+ (Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Queer, Intersex plus) gardening club 'Rainbow Grow' is sprouting up this April in Hackney.

The club plans to produce a whole rainbow of edible plants at Cordwainers Grow near London Fields station, and will meet every Tuesday for a gardening session.

Clair Battaglino, a Dalston resident who helped set up Rainbow Grow and runs her own community gardening enterprise KeentoGreen, said: "Growing is a lot more than planting some seeds; growing helps build a community where you can make friends and have fun. Come along and give it a try and you'll reap a lot more than fresh veggies."

The group is supported by the Council and Royal Horticultural Society. To find out more, search Rainbow Grow on Facebook; e-mail: rainbowgrowk2g@gmail.com; or come along to the first gardening session on 25 April, 5pm to 7pm, at Cordwainers Grow, 8 Well Street, E9.

Council backs London Mayor's tree-planting programme for green spaces

HACKNEY'S green spaces will receive a welcome boost when 120 new trees are planted.

The saplings in Haggerston Park, Shoreditch Park, London Fields, Mabley Green and Millfields Park will add to the 9,500 trees already in the borough's parks, and 10,500 on its streets.

Fifty trees are being funded by a grant from the Mayor of London, with the Council paying for the others.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, Transport and Parks, said: "I'm delighted to be able to add to the borough's 20,000 trees. Trees absorb pollutants, which helps to improve air quality, crucial for people's health in urban areas. They also provide an important habitat for wildlife and add to the beauty and tranquillity of our parks."

Mayor of London, Sadiq Khan, said: "I want London to be one of the world's greenest cities, which is why I've prioritised this funding to kick-start the delivery of thousands of new trees and to protect and enhance our much-loved green spaces.

"This is the first step in my plans for a major tree-planting programme across London in partnership with businesses and boroughs."

Tipping Point

Until 16 April, Jealous Gallery, 53 Curtain Road, Shoreditch, EC2A 3PT

A new exhibition at the Jealous Gallery brings one of Britain's most celebrated contemporary artists together with one of its most famous magazines.

'Tipping Point' opened on 3 April to coincide with the launch of the Big Issue magazine's 'art special edition', which was guest edited by Charming Baker. He chose the theme of 'tipping points' because, he says, lives can hinge on single decisive moments, something that Big Issue vendors know only too well.

Charming Baker persuaded art world giants including Sir Peter Blake, Jonathan Yeo and Jake and Dinos Chapman, to contribute works on the theme, which are illustrated in the exhibition. The magazine also features work by men and women on the edge of society.

ART &
EXHIBITIONS*LA FÊTE TRISTE*Until 13 Apr, Tues-Sun, noon-7pm

French artist Lolie Darko will be showcasing her enchanting, big-eyed paintings in her first solo show 'La Fête Triste'. Her work depicts a cynical reality sustained by sad, watery-eyed children and challenges our views of this naive vision of innocence. BSMT Space, 5D Stoke Newington Road, N16 8BH.

Students from Tayyibah Girls School met with patients at St Joseph's Hospice in order to capture their life story

The story of my life

PEOPLE usually have to be a celebrity to get the 'This Is Your Life' treatment. But last month, patients at St Joseph's Hospice were presented with carefully crafted books, recounting their own life stories.

These autobiographies were the product of an unusual collaboration with students from Tayyibah Girls School, in Stamford Hill. Year 9 students were paired up with hospice patients and challenged to find out as much as they could about each others' lives.

After a number of visits to the hospice, the girls then returned to school to make a unique 'life book' about the older person, including stories, quotes, pictures and artwork.

Amy Outingdyke, Day Hospice Manager, said: "Our patients loved spending time with the girls and sharing their stories. Despite the difference in age, background and culture, they all gelled together so well and learned from each other. The books the girls presented at the end were so beautiful and meaningful to the patients."

The project was the brainchild of Knowledge to Action, an education charity working across the UK's Muslim faith-schools.

Umair Saeed, the charity's London Relationship Manager, said: "We teach the importance of community and social responsibility. More importantly, we give students hands-on experience that allows them to turn knowledge into real action."

News in brief

Primary schools could become no-drive zones

TWO roads outside primary schools could be closed to traffic during set times, in a bid to make it safer for children to walk or cycle to school.

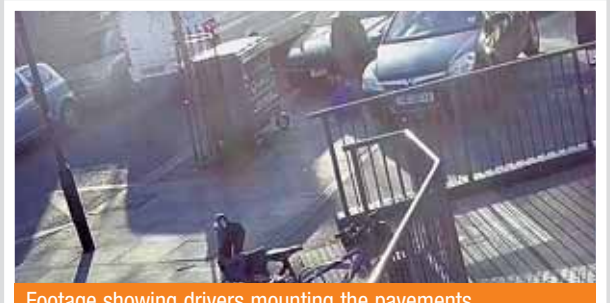

The School Streets scheme was announced as shocking CCTV footage emerged, showing motorists driving onto pavements directly outside Tyssen School, in Oldhill Street, N16.

The Council has launched a consultation on proposals to pilot a scheme to make the street a pedestrian and cycle-only zone during set times in the morning and afternoon. The scheme would also cover St John the Baptist School, in Crondall Street, N1, where there are also concerns about pupil safety. People living on both streets would be able to register for an exemption, meaning they could still get to and leave their homes by car. Blue badge holders would also be exempt, and vehicles already parked in the street would be able to leave the area at any point.

However, unregistered vehicles entering the street during designated times would be identified by cameras and issued with a penalty charge notice.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, Transport and Parks, said: "Too many children in Hackney are driven to school. It's bad for air quality and it's bad for their health. School Streets is one thing we're doing to try to make it safer and easier for children to walk and cycle to school. The shocking footage of cars driving on the pavement outside a primary school shows that there is still more to do."

Those affected by the scheme will receive details by post along with a survey to complete and return. Drop-in information sessions will also be held at both schools. If the pilot proves successful, the Council could roll the scheme out to other suitable schools in the borough. To find out more, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/school-streets

First woman in space inspires Clapton Girls

THE first woman ever to travel into space celebrated her 80th birthday by meeting science students from Clapton Girls' Academy.

Dr Valentina Tereshkova made history in June 1963, by completing 48 orbits of the earth.

Today, she remains the only woman to have travelled solo in space.

In recognition of her achievement, a specially commissioned film about her life was screened at the Science Museum for her 80th birthday, on 15 March, along with a performance from the Russian Philharmonic Orchestra.

Six physics students were invited from Clapton Girls' Academy, where Dr Tereshkova has lent her name to the Tereshkova building, in which students study technology subjects.

Speaking through a translator, Dr Tereshkova said that she felt extremely honoured to have a building named after her at the academy, and was proud that her achievements were still inspiring young women. She also wished the students good luck in their upcoming exams.

Meanwhile, A-level physics student Maysa Chunra was so inspired by meeting Dr Tereshkova that declared she wanted to be 'the first hijabi to go to space'.

Some of the young participants and staff at last year's Summer Hype camp

Do believe the hype

FORTY local children who could not otherwise afford a holiday will go to summer camp this year, thanks to a pioneering kids charity.

Now in its third year, Summer Hype takes children, aged 10 to 12, on a five-day holiday every August.

Typically nominated by their schools, these are children who are on free school meals, those with Special and Educational Needs, and those whose schools think they would benefit from a break.

"Every child needs a fun week away to learn, to grow and to make new friends," said the charity's co-founder Manya Eversley.

Raised in Hackney herself, she was a pupil at Lauriston Primary School.

She added: "The camp facilitates personal development, and we get to witness the children grow in confidence, fostering a sense of community, and making lasting friendships."

Last year, the charity was able to take 30 children on holiday. This year, they hope to increase that number to 40 and extend the camp to seven days. They rely, however, on donations from supporters.

Each summer, the nominated children are taken to Grosvenor Hall, a former manor house in Ashford, Kent, with 50 acres of adventure and recreational facilities.

There, they can engage in activities from arts and crafts to outdoor adventures and drama.

"Summer Hype is the best place I've ever been to," said one local child who went to the camp last year.

"I'm going to apologise to my mum. Being here has shown me that I haven't been treating people with respect. I'm going to change that," added another attendee.

News in brief

Get the message on safe sex

PROTECT yourself, stay safe and if you're worried, get tested: that's the message from Hackney Youth Parliament, in a new campaign to spread awareness about sexual health to local young people.

Almost one in 20 Hackney young people, aged 15 to 24, have tested positive for chlamydia, one of the highest rates in the UK. Newly-elected Hackney Youth Parliament members want to change this, with a campaign to get more young people in the borough tested and treated for sexually transmitted infections (STIs).

They have created a short film 'Infected Connection' to show the consequences of unsafe sex, which has been screened at youth hubs and shared over social media. Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Deputy Mayor of Hackney and Cabinet Member for Children's Services, said: "The shockingly high rate of chlamydia infection suggests too many young people in Hackney are putting their health at risk by having unsafe sex. It's great that the Hackney Youth Parliament is helping to change this by promoting the message on safe sex and supporting the programme of STI testing and treatment we have in Hackney."

Drop-in sexual health sessions for young people are held at the CHYPS+ centre in Homerton and at Young Hackney youth hubs. Anyone in Hackney, aged 24 or under, can receive free condoms as part of the Come Correct C-card scheme. Lights, camera and action for young wannabe filmmakers and directors

TWO television producers who have previously worked with Michael Jackson and Beyoncé are launching a new programme to teach Hackney children.

Husband and wife team Des and Shazna Burkinshaw run Clapton-based video production company Magnificent. They decided to launch a Young Directors Film School after being 'bullied' into it by their nine-year-old daughter Zizi.

"Zizi was determined to become a 'filmer' too," said Shazna, who has worked on 'Blue Peter', 'Dick and Dom in Da Bungalow' and 'Top of the Pops'.

She added: "I looked around for a course for her and realised there wasn't one. So here we are, two months later, running the Young Directors Film School ourselves."

The weekly after-school club will begin on 18 April at the Round Chapel in Clapton. Tutors who have formerly worked at the BBC will teach nine to 15-year-olds the basics of scripting, lighting, camera work, sound and editing.

"Many of Zizi's friends are hoping to be YouTubers at 10," explained Des. Adding: "Anyone can stick a smartphone in someone's face, but if you want to be good, there's a lot else to learn. Luckily, it's fun."

The couple are also running a two-day introduction to film-making course for nine to 15-year-olds, from 10-11 April at the Round Chapel, Clapton. Places cost £55 per day.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2014. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville, was directly elected by the borough in September 2016. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, email: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 3269. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Rosemary Sales.

Accessing all areas

FREE-HAND drawing to the beat of a tambourine and art inspired by the sound of a ukulele were just some of the interactive experiences for visitors to Hackney Museum on Disabled Access Day.

As well as an afternoon of workshops, visitors on 11 March were able to watch pop-up performances and speak to disabled artists. Discussions took place on identity and the power of art as a means to challenge people's expectations and ideas about disability.

Daniel, one of the disabled artists whose work was showcased on the day, said: "I was proud to exhibit my photography and share this space with my friends. I had a fun day drawing, playing music together and meeting new people."

The day also saw the launch of an exhibition, created by We Are Artists, the museum's art group.

It is one of two current shows in the museum that feature the work and stories of people with disabilities, from past and present day Hackney.

Nikki McLauchlan said: "My trip to Hackney Museum was the first one I'd made. Perfectly in the spirit of the Disabled

Developing sensory art skills during a Disabled Access Day workshop at Hackney Museum

Access Day theme 'You and Somewhere New'.

"I was really impressed with the exhibitions and the accessibility of the venue as a whole. The museum has the great feel of being a community hub, and the spirit of inclusion is alive and well throughout the venue."

Emma Winch, Heritage and Learning Manager at Hackney Museum, said: "For our staff, Disabled Access Day is more than just a day. We work with, provide opportunities for, and celebrate the achievements of people with disabilities and learning difficulties all year round."

We Are Artists is currently looking for more members to join the group, which meets every Wednesday afternoon at Hackney Museum.

Those interested in joining the group, should e-mail: andy.critchley@advanceuk.org; or call Advance UK on: 0333 012 4307.

News in brief

National award for patient experience

THE 'Innovation Fund', set up by City and Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG) in order to transform local health and wellbeing, was a star of this year's National Patient Experience Network Awards.

Since 2014, the fund has given a total of £800,000 to 27 different projects that help people to look after themselves and each other better; improve overall confidence and wellbeing; and make health and care services easier to access.

These projects include those run by local organisations like Bikur Cholim, Spice and St Mungo's, Doctors of the World, Hackney Council for Voluntary Service and St Joseph's Hospice.

Catherine Macadam, Patient and Public Involvement Chair at City and Hackney CCG, said: "We are delighted to have won this award, which is a testament to all of the great work that has been delivered by the projects and their partners. Residents and patients from within Hackney have played an important role in the success of the fund. They have articulated local needs, suggested different ways of doing things, and helped shape the fund's application process. We would like to thank them for all of their invaluable contributions."

New funding, launched last November, will increase the scale of the successful projects, in partnership with local mainstream health and care providers.

Hackney aims to become a more autism-friendly borough

AUTISTIC people can often face discrimination and feel left out, but the Council and health services want to make Hackney a more autism-friendly place.

They are working with autistic residents, carers and the Hackney Autism Alliance to draft the borough's first ever autism strategy.

Panda Mery, an autistic resident, said: "There are simple changes organisations can make to improve the lives of autistic people. Celebrating differences, designing new services with autistics, tackling bullying, offering mentoring, improving the environment and staff attitudes can all help.

"An autism-friendly

Hackney will also benefit people who work here."

Amanda Elliot, from Healthwatch Hackney and parent of an autistic son, added: "We have five great autistic representatives on the board who are already getting managers in Hackney to view autism differently."

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for

Health, Social Care and Devolution, said: "We are working hard to ensure Hackney is a place for everyone. A more accepting and supporting borough will enable better wellbeing for autistic people."

A healthy eating programme from Shoreditch Trust

www.shoreditchtrust.org.uk

SHOREDITCH Trust's Food For Life Programme works with members of the community to encourage affordable healthy eating, cooking skills and food knowledge. Shakshuka is a dish of eggs poached in tomato sauce, peppers and onions that is popular in the Middle East and North Africa. In this recipe, it is spiced with cumin and harissa. Packed with eggs – an inexpensive source of protein – and vegetables, shakshuka is a healthy dish that can be enjoyed for any meal, but works particularly well for breakfast. Swap the peppers for an aubergine or courgettes and adjust the spiciness of the dish as necessary by adding more or less harissa paste. Serve with sourdough toast or wholemeal pitta bread to mop up all the lovely juices.

Shakshuka

Makes 6 portions

Preparation time
10 mins

Cooking time
35 mins

Ingredients

- 1tbsp olive oil
- 2 onions, finely sliced
- 2 coloured peppers, finely sliced
- 3 garlic cloves
- 1tsp ground cumin
- 2tsp harissa paste
- 2 tins chopped tomatoes
- Small bunch of fresh coriander, finely chopped
- 1tsp ground black pepper
- 1tsp sugar
- 6 eggs

Method

- Heat oil in a large frying pan over medium-low heat
- Add onion and peppers. Cook gently until soft
- Add sliced garlic and cook until tender, stir in cumin and harissa, and cook for 1 minute
- Add in the tomatoes and finely chopped coriander stalks, season with black pepper and sugar. Simmer until tomatoes have cooked down and thickened, for about 15 minutes
- Make a small hole in the sauce and crack an egg into it, repeat with the remaining eggs, spreading them across the pan. Either put the lid on the saucepan, or put the pan in the oven for 10 minutes to bake the eggs
- Sprinkle with chopped coriander leaves and serve.

Shoreditch Trust

Have your say on the future of Shoreditch

THE Council wants residents, businesses and visitors to the borough to respond to a consultation about future developments in Shoreditch.

The area provides more than 40,000 jobs, in 4,000 businesses, and has played a key part in the prosperity of the borough.

It is also home to more than 7,000 residents and this is set to increase as more mixed use development happens. The plan 'Future Shoreditch' will describe a vision for the area by 2034 and set out planning policies that will guide and manage development and investment.

To complete the consultation online, visit: <https://consultation.hackney.gov.uk>. Alternatively, e-mail comments to: futureshoreditch@hackney.gov.uk. The deadline for submissions is 10 May.
